

Mint Announces Current Coin Orders to be Shipped by October 10

October 4, 2001

The Mint today announced that all customers who have recently experienced delays in the arrival of products can expect their orders to be shipped by October 10.

A combination of high order volume and the Mint's transition to a new, enhanced systems technology for catalog and order fulfillment, coupled with recent national transportation interruptions, resulted in a temporary backlog of orders.

The Mint is committed to offering its customers exceptional customer service. In order to continue this long-standing tradition, we are changing the way we do business so that we can offer you the best shopping experience and customer service available. We thank you for your patience and loyalty while we complete the transition to this new system.
